

Abstract of the Disclosure

A method for modeling and design of a coupled cavity laser device is provided. A coupled cavity laser device includes a resonant cavity that includes at least two sub-cavities. The method of the invention includes selecting device characteristics of the laser, performing round trip iteration calculations, including an inter-cavity field exchange, for each sub-cavity, testing to determine whether a convergence has been reached, and computing a device output beam characteristic.